

DIFFERENT “FOX-HUNTING”

Now it is possible to solve the problem of the origin of the foxhunting in England, you know, those riders with crimson-red coats on, with a bunch of dogs which kill the poor fox like nothing, well, is that sport? I'm glad it's finished now.

The origin of it is out of this world, I think. First, in Bible Eve is “made” out of a rib of Adam! Now that rib is “räfben” in rot-language, spoken at the south of Finland, the original one, and “räf” is fox, “ben” is bone, so Eve was “made” from a fox bone. But, thousands of years ago, here in “Vinland” (southern part of Finland) we had a custom of checking young girl's possibilities to become mothers, first, they had to be beautiful, then their vagina was opened and seen through a “crimson tube”, at sunlight, by three older woman, it had to be crimson red, to be healthy and also they checked it's sensibility. Now this was done at what Tallin was called then, Reval, but today the writing is wrong, it should be “Räfval” which means choosing the fox! (There were other systems to choose the men, their rods had to be of certain colour and shape, balls egg shape, etc. etc.)

Both those names are pronounced alike, that's why the error in writing. Also in Carelia there is an old saying that girl's clitoris is made out of the tongue of fox. Still some fifty or more years back pussy was called “reva” in Helsinki and around, a reminder to fox. Ladies here in Finland used to carry a fox skin around their neck. Also sexy lady is called foxy in England.

So what do we call it when we go “fox-hunting” today, dating, and delicate sport? But without dogs.

One more thing, when we copulate, after a successful foxhunting, (hohoo) we “reform” a new baby, but again there is an error in writing, it should be “räf-forming”, fox forming, since we hope to have another beautiful foxy girl to born, or a handsome boy. Is this enough?

Leo Nygren